Most teenagers get some pocket money from their parents every week. Some get as little as five pounds a week. In most homes children help with the housework in return for the pocket money they get.

Steve and his friends, Ben and Sheila, live in Richmond. Let's see how much pocket money they get, what they do in return and how they spend their pocket money.

Sheila gets ten pounds a week and she helps her mother in the house in return. Sometimes she buys music with her pocket money, but usually she saves it. Then she spends most of it on Christmas presents for her family and friends. She has one brother and she wants to buy him a nice striped jersey this year.

Steve gets seven pounds from his father every Saturday. He spends some of it on sweets, chocolate and comics. Steve tries to save most of his pocket money each week so he can buy an iPad.

Ben gets only five pounds from his parents, but he earns some money every week. Every Wednesday he gets some magazines from the local shop and delivers them to people's homes on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday after school. The customers must receive their magazines before Saturday. Ben earns fifteen pounds a week delivering magazines. He spends some of his money on books and on his favourite fishing magazines. He's saving up to buy a skateboard and a pair of skis.
