Speaker 1 – I think a lot of people forget that the majority of computer owners are in places like the United States, Asia or Europe, and even in those countries there are still plenty of people who have never used a computer at all and certainly don’t have one for entertainment at home. After all, they’re not cheap to buy! And in some places there are communities who don’t have running water, let alone electricity or computers. It’s very unjust, if you ask me.

Speaker 2 – I think it’s a real temptation for some people – it’s too easy when you see a computer – you’re looking for a birthday present for a friend and then you notice that you can get a cheap digital camera or perhaps some new jeans and before you know it you’re typing in your credit card number and buying a couple hundred euros worth of goods. Of course there are also dangers in giving private information on the Internet – it’s all a nightmare really.

Speaker 3 – I just don’t know how people did school projects and things like that before the age of the computer – it must have taken up all their spare time! Our teachers expect us to do a lot of research and it would take ages if we had to go to a library and look things up in books. Now the answer to almost any question is at your finger tips. I think it’s fantastic!

Speaker 4 – We’ve got cable now so we’re actually connected to the Internet all the time. We listen to the radio, the children play games. Since we’ve got one of those new flat screens we also download a lot of movies and watch them on the computer. I actually bought it originally so that I could bring work home from the office not for entertainment – but I don’t get much done with all these new possibilities.

Speaker 5 – I don’t have a computer at home – it’s too expensive! – and I try to leave the laptop in the office at the weekend. If I didn’t do that I really don’t think I would get any rest. I know lots of people my age who work every weekend, answering emails, preparing presentations and doing internet searches and so on. It can seem like quite good fun but it’s still work, and I think a lot of people forget that.
Teacher – friend 1
Tom is quite a good friend of yours. Sometimes he is troublesome, but he seems to be nice and friendly. You would like him to join the camping adventure you are planning for summer. You remember him once helping someone in the street with his luggage and being very friendly with dogs and all animals.

Student – friend 2
You have been planning a two day camping adventure with you for when you have finished the school year. There is one boy, Tom, who wants to join. You are against. Explain your objections to another friend of yours.
You remember him being very homesick, uneasy and lazy during the last class trip.
