LISTENING TAPESCRIPT

INTERVIEW

I: Have your original creations ever got you into trouble?

B: When I was at secondary school, I used to change my hair to match my clothes. I was a big fan of the early '80s bands. And my favourite clothes were inspired by a popular '80s band called Soft Cell. My favourite outfit was a mad skirt worn over bright yellow tights. But one day I went further and matched it with bright yellow hair. And then obviously some of my teachers sent me home for being a bad example to the younger pupils. Even now, my boyfriend will often look at me before we go out and say, "You aren't seriously going out in that, are you?"

I: Have you always wanted to work in the fashion industry?

B: Oh, yes, definitely. Because I've always loved clothes and enjoyed having a unique style. After secondary school, I did a fashion design degree at the University of Westminster in London. In fact, it was then I had my proudest style moment. I bought an incredibly brightly coloured South American hat and teamed it with leather trousers which I made from old coats. The fashion designer John Galliano was judging our final projects and when he came to mine, he looked at me up and down and commented on how stylish I looked. Colleagues joke that I've influenced him ever since.

I: What ambitions did you have after you graduated?

B: Well, I knew I wanted to be a designer for a high-street shop, which I thought would be more fun than working for a famous designer. My favourite shop was River Island and it was always my ambition to work there. I was really excited when, two years after graduating, I got a job as a junior designer for River Island. Right from the start I loved it here.

I: What influences your designs?

B: My own style mostly. But travelling and celebrities are also high on the list. There are many celebrities, such as Gwen Stephani, who have a great, individual style and we might take elements from their looks. I also get to travel a lot with my job, and I recently went to Ibiza to see what clubbers are wearing there. Now I am in charge of River Island's casual wear and I am really proud of the huge range of clothes we have.

I: What style tips can you give us?

B: I would say, pick up the things you like from what friends, family and celebrities are wearing. Jewellery can really make a difference to an outfit by updating it instantly. But above all, feel comfortable and confident in what you wear.

STUDENT:

You have just won the lottery. (It is up to you to say how much.) Now you are meeting your best (and only) friend, wanting to tell him/her the great news and your wonderful plans about what to do with the money. You want to invite him/her on a nice holiday together, perhaps travel together, start a new hobby together, etc. (Give your own ideas.)

The problem is, your friend doesn't believe you at all.

TEACHER:

You are meeting your best friend, who wants to tell you some great news: he/she has just won the lottery. He wants you to take a nice holiday with him/her, travel together, start a new hobby together, etc. (He/she will tell you his/her ideas.)

However, you know him/her to be an unreliable person who doesn't tell the truth very often. He/she has made up various stories which are not true. His/her friendship with you is very unpredictable. You have been disappointed with him/her several times, so you feel he/she is lying even now.
