TEXT A

Watch out for the daily gratuity or service charge added to your bill. Amounts differ, but American lines tend to charge more (around $15 per day), so it's best to buy a package in advance that includes drinks, gratuities, and wi-fi.

TEXT B

Mixed tables is a cruising tradition that still exists (and can be a fun way to meet fellow passengers), but most lines offer flexible dining where you can eat at any time, book tables in speciality restaurants, and sit anywhere you like.

TEXT C

It will be smaller than the equivalent hotel room and ensuites are compact. If you're worried about feeling claustrophobic, book an ocean view or balcony cabin. If you're concerned about seasickness (not usually an issue on bigger, modern ships), book a midship cabin as they are less affected by choppy seas.

TEXT D

No, if you don't want to, but lots of guests still do. Most cruise lines don't have a dress code, though more traditional lines still hold themed nights or black-tie evenings.

TEXT E

Upon boarding, all passengers have to report to their muster stations as part of mandatory procedures. You will also watch videos at home before the cruise or on your cabin TV.

Teacher (an English-speaking host parent)

The teenager from Slovakia you are hosting has been offered the chance to go on an adventurous trip with a group of their peers who are very well trained in surviving in the wilderness. You do not agree with your exchange student joining this group as they have never before experienced such a trip and are not trained for living in harsh conditions. You feel responsible for them while they are staying here with you.

Your exchange student starts.

Look at the pictures and choose three adrenaline sports that you consider the most interesting for you and that you would like to try.

Discuss:

- explain why you chose those three;
- say what the advantages and disadvantages of trying those sports might be;
- mention if your parents would agree with your choices, why/why not, and give reasons.
